COTTON INDUSTRY UNDER CODE TODAY

WASHINGTON, July 16.—(AP)—The cotton textile industry tomorrow will set the pace for the nation's March to industrial recovery by inaugurating its new code of fair competition by which 100,000 idle textile workers are expected to return to work within 60 days.

Not only will some 100,000 unemployed workers go back to the mills in the next two months, but some 400,000 now employed will stand at their looms and spindles under conditions more favorable to them than ever before in the history of the industry.

First of the country's industries to put into effect the administration's program to restore purchasing power through spread of employment and maintenance of wage standards, the cotton mills will start tomorrow on a 40-hour, two-shift week, with minimum wages of $12 weekly in the south and $13 in the north.

Child Labor Abolished. Child labor, long a point of controversy in the industry, has been abolished; the "stretch-out" system, by which mill owners increased the number of machines each worker must attend is under official investigation; and those limited groups of employees exempted from the 40-hour week regulations are guaranteed time and a half for overtime work beyond that limit.

The industry's leaders tonight took pride in the fact their industry was first to put the administration's recovery program in effect.

"Someone had to pioneer," said George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute and chairman of the Cotton Textile Industry committee.

Real Problem Ahead. In a formal statement he warned that "it would be a fatal mistake to let speculative profits in the stock and commodity markets make us return to the psychology of 1929," and that "the real problem of restoring consumer purchasing power and wiping out unemployment lies ahead."

Sloan paid high tribute to the recovery act went far to restore hope and confidence, but cautioned:

"It isn't enough to have the act. Industry must actually work under the act to end the emergency."

Sloan paid high tribute to the cooperation of stockholders, management and employees of the cotton textile mills, said:

"The cotton textile industry has taken its courage in its hands. It has blocked out a plan of co-operation on its sector of the industrial front and, tomorrow putting that plan into effect, advances as the spear head of the attack under the act.

"All this together with reduced weekly hours of employees to aid in reducing unemployment means a heavy increase in our costs."

By executive order, President Roosevelt tonight authorized textile mills of all sorts to come in under the wage-raising, hour-limiting provisions of the cotton industry's code which takes effect tomorrow, signifying immediate pay raises for hundreds of thousands of workers.

After a day-long conference with Hugh S. Johnson, the industrial administrator, aboard the yacht Sequoia, the president postponed decision on the plan for calling on all industry to join in the national recovery movement by raising wages and limiting working hours, so as to make more jobs without waiting for action on their codes of fair competition—the means offered by the industrial control law to achieve this purpose.

The president's order made binding upon rayon weaving plants, silk mills, cotton thread and "throwing" of thread-making factories the 40-hour work week and the $12 and $13 minimum wage levels, with corresponding increases for higher paid employees, prescribed in the agreement signed by the cotton men. It was roughly estimated that this meant more pay for 600,000 to 700,000 men.

In separate orders the president ruled that though the cotton code goes into full force tomorrow, the date promulgated, firms which did not sign it may immediately seek a hearing if they regard its terms as unjust to them. To give them time they made exempt for ten days from the penalties prescribed by law for non-compliance with the code's terms.

At the same time, at the request of the industry, Mr. Roosevelt made the cotton code effective indefinitely instead of for four months only, and he accepted the suggestion that his demand for proportionate raises to all workers now earning above the minimum wage level be left to a steering committee of the cotton men to work out.

The president's action on the application of rayon, silk and other related lines, together with the raises put into effect by steel plants and others filing wage-raising agreements with Johnson, brings more pay tomorrow for nearly one million men and women.

WEDNESDAY DEADLINE FOR COTTON CONTRACTS

WASHINGTON, July 16.—(AP)—Farm administrators kept tabulators on duty today examining contract offers from cotton growers after setting Wednesday as the deadline when they will be accepted here from county agents.

They also intend getting out the first checks to growers Wednesday to compensate them for agreeing to plow up from 25 to 50 per cent of their crop. Growers have offered in returns so far to plow up about 9,700,000 acres, administrators estimated. This, they indicated, will reduce the potential crop by at least 3,600,000 bales if the contracts are all accepted. Acceptances of contracts will go out in large numbers this week.

Those intrepid guardians of law and order in France will be enlivened by the Travellers' quest when they sing of "Maurice, the Gendarme," in their featured number over the WABC-Columbia network at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon. The singers also present "When the Bells Ring," "Blue Bell" and "When the Sunset Turns the Ocean's Blue to Gold."

In the absence of Maestro Nat Shilkret, who is enjoying a vacation in Europe, Brother Jack will lead the Shilkret orchestra in a group of new and old dance tunes during the broadcast of An Evening in Paris, to be heard over the WABC-Columbia network at 7:30 o'clock tonight. The selections will include "Valencia," "Isn't it Heavenly?", "My Bluebird's Singing the Blues," and the closing medley, comprised of "Swonderful" and "My One and Only." Agnes Moorehead, comedienne, will again be heard in a short sketch as Cousin Nanette.

A popular concert of light symphonic works will be presented by Howard Barlow, conductor, the Columbia Symphony orchestra, at 9 o'clock tonight over WABC and the Columbia network. The highly varied program will include Russian works of Tchaikowsky and Rachmaninoff, Austrian compositions of Kreutzer, and Scandinavian selections by Swenson and Sibelius.

UTILITIES INQUIRY NEARING CLIMAX

take place, completion of the taking of testimony is in prospect this afternoon. Two of the five respondents already have been heard and Vice Chairman Perry T. Knight has given part of his direct testimony. Mr. Knight and Commissioner Jule W. Felton will be on the stand this morning as they will be followed by Commissioner Albert Woodruff if he is able to appear or decides to present a deposition through his attorney, John Darsey. Then will follow the rebuttal testimony of the Georgia Federation of Labor and the Atlanta Federation of Trades, movants in the case and the proceedings will be ready for argument.

Commissioner Woodruff, who was stricken two weeks ago still is in Emory University hospital and it appeared doubtful Sunday if he would be present today. It is not known whether or not he will present a deposition. Mr. Darsey, the commissioner's son-in-law as well as his attorney, said Saturday that up to that time Mr. Woodruff's physicians had refused to permit him to make the deposition. The commissioner is suffering the after effects of a heart attack.

The governor has not yet fixed a limitation on the arguments. It is expected that Jack C. Savage, labor counsel, and Lamar C. Rucker, of Athens, and Emerson George, of Madison, will argue for the movants while the commissioners themselves and their attorneys, Robert W. Blackburn for Chairman James A. Perry; Jule Felton for his son, Commissioner Felton; Senator Gordon Knox, of Hazelhurst, for Commissioner Knight; Senator Joe Ben Jackson, of Gray, for Commissioner Walter R. McDaniel, and Mr. Darsey for Mr. Woodruff will present the arguments.

The governor has indicated that his decision on the ouster action will be made as soon as he has had time to study the law, the facts and the circumstances thoroughly.

Today's sessions will begin at 10 o'clock this morning unless the governor is delayed on his return trip from Lake Okechobee, Fla., where he attended the funeral of his father-in-law Sunday afternoon. If the chief executive is delayed the hearing will be resumed immediately after his return.

STEINER TRUSTEES HIT OUSTER MOVE

Effort "To Nullify Clinic's Effectiveness and Usefulness" Charged.

As Alderman J. Charlie Murphy Sunday prepared to ask council action in the most recent outbreak over conduct of the Albert Steiner cancer ward, trustees of Steiner issued a statement attacking the effort to oust Dr. Rupert H. Fike, Steiner's medical director, and scoring the effort "to nullify Steiner's effectiveness and usefulness."

Murphy late Sunday was still undecided as to what course he will take when he gains the floor of council this afternoon, but it appeared he will ask establishment of a separate board to handle the cancer ward.

There appeared, however, to be such a strong sentiment for abolition of the Grady board of trustees that late Sunday it was not known definitely just what Murphy would back.

A councilman battle is certain, with friends of the Steiner trustees and proponents of the Grady trustees slated to engage in a heated clash. Murphy and his committee, at least a majority of them, were interested in obtaining a two-thirds majority, pledged to some concrete action anticipating a veto by Mayor James L. Key to any action which would curtail the authority of the Grady board in administering and directing Steiner.

If a separate board is established Milton Lieberman and Joseph Hirsch, chairman of the Grady board, and a committee of officials of the Fulton County Medical Society, Hirsch and Lieberman Sunday expressed confidence in the council committee and "in the good judgment and sincerity of council."

Courts To Decide Issues.

The courts are expected to decide issues raised when the Grady board attempted to nullify the contract between the city and the Steiner trustees by firing Fike, and in the interim Fike will continue in his job through the power of an injunction which the Steiner board obtained Saturday.

Opponents of Steiner claim that admission of pay patients is a violation of the Steiner will, which provides that the institution shall be established for the poor of Atlanta. Steiner trustees, however, defend such admissions.

Following is the statement issued jointly by Hirsch and Lieberman, Steiner trustees.

"Since several other statements

Sneeze Restores Sight To Man Blind 50 Years

DALLAS, Texas, July 16.—(UP) Just imagine being blind for 50 years, sneezing, and suddenly regaining your sight.

That's what E. A. Griswold, 84, did, and found a marvelous world. Until he sneezed, he sold pencils for a living. His first sight of an electric fan startled him.

have been issued in this controversy, which incidentally was thrust upon us, we feel the public is entitled to know certain facts.

"We had and still have every confidence in the council committee, of which the Hon. J. Charlie Murphy is chairman. We thought the committee should make its own investigations and its own findings without any effort on our part to influence them. We therefore, refrained from any attempt either to intimidate or to suggest to them. It is regrettable that others did attempt to ignore them by their efforts to unduly influence the committee."

"We have every confidence in the good judgment and sincerity of council and in its determination to protect Steiner for the use of the poor people."

Separate Board Suggested.

"Several times, at least three members of the present board of trustees of Grady hospital suggested that a separate board to control Steiner would be for the best interests of the institution. These were Mr. Harris, John Smith and Councilman J. Frank Beck. In addition, John B. Franklin, superintendent of Grady, has expressed the same sentiment.

"It has been said in meetings of the committee that it would be a crime to stop pay patients at Steiner, and we subscribe to that on the idea that the poor people of Atlanta or any other place are not all paupers."

"Certain members of the Fulton County Medical Society have said that there are 35 times as much radium for treatment outside of Steiner as there is there. If that is true, where would the Grady board go to sell the radium emanations in accordance with the resolution passed last Wednesday. Has the Grady board the right to sell such emanations, when it prohibits treatment at a nominal fee of patients at Steiner?"

"The facts about the radium, as released by the bureau of mines, Washington, D. C., are these. There are 2,200 milligrams of radium which can be so used in the entire state of Georgia. Steiner ward owns 1,025 milligrams of this entire total. It is, therefore, apparent that Steiner has nearly 50 per cent of the entire available radium supply of the whole state."

"This board of trustees did not wish to be injected into newspapers in any controversy. We have done our work as we saw it, and in the spirit in which we believed Mr. Steiner, if he were alive, would insist that it be done. We regret that we have been forced to issue any statement. Our action in appealing to the courts was to protect a large investment which has been made through the generosity of the late Mr. Steiner, and to prevent actual prostitution and dissipation of the estate in so far as the investment at Steiner is concerned."

"We are frank to say that if Mr. Samuel Dobbs were not the chairman or a member of the Grady board of trustees an amicable adjustment of conditions at Steiner would have been evolved many months ago. His attitude has prevented any such negotiations. We were invited to meet with the board of trustees, but by the time that Mr. Dobbs completed his long speech we all were so worn out that we did not know where to begin. No one else had an opportunity to talk."

No Objection to Fike.

"We made every effort to ascertain whether there was any objection to Dr. Rupert Fike from a professional standpoint, either as to his ability or his service. The Grady board is unanimous in telling us there is none."

"Mr. Dobbs said his objections to Dr. Fike were as follows:

- "1. Fike had bad teeth."
- "2. He failed to keep his nails manicured."
- "3. He failed to keep shaved as often as Dobbs thought he should."
- "4. His clothes were not neatly pressed."
- "5. That he just should be gotten rid of."

"We were told that Dr. Price Palmer, who has since gone to a good position in Chicago, was a trouble-maker, and must be ousted."

"It is said that all members of the Fulton County Medical Society oppose admission of pay patients to Steiner. Our answer is that if this is true, there are some mighty big liars among them. We know it is not true."

"There is one letter in our files from one of the leading Atlanta doctors, which says that patients at Steiner cannot get the proper service unless Steiner is divorced from Grady. It assails the fight on Steiner branding it as an effort to make Steiner a political football."

"Dr. Joseph H. Hines, medical director of Grady, is a good physician, but he does not pose as an expert in deep therapy treatments nor as an expert cancer diagnostician."

"In the face of this, however, the Grady board voted to oust a man recognized throughout the country as one of its foremost experts, and place Dr. Hines in charge."

"The American College of Surgeons has been quoted profusely by those fighting the Steiner ward, but when the college wanted to select the best men for special work in this area, it paid the highest tribute to the Steiner staff and at the same time passed over several of its own members in so doing. It did as we have done—recognized merit and ability."

"There are several members of the college in Atlanta. Dr. Fike, however, was selected by the college as a member of a national committee on the study of malignant diseases. He is not a member of the college. This committee organizes cancer clinics, sets up the method of procedure and supervises treatments."

"Dr. Everett L. Bishop, of the Steiner staff, and who also is not a member of the college, was regarded as one of the 10 or 12 best pathologists in America, when he was honored and recognized by the college in being given membership on the bone registry committee."

"In conclusion, we wish to say to the public that we both were born and reared in Atlanta. We are not rich men. All our property is located in Atlanta. We are citizens. We will not move out of the city if we become rich."

"Our sole ambition in administration of the Steiner ward is to provide the best possible treatment for poor people. If we have done that, we shall have been compensated fully in the knowledge that a humanitarian task has been well done. That is all we ask, and we propose to use every facility at our command to insist that we be given that privilege."

AMERICA TO PRESS FOR PRICE RAISING

U. S. Delegation Hopes
To Salvage Some Good
From Waning W. E. C.

LONDON, July 16.—(AP)—The world economic conference begins its last whole week tomorrow with the American delegation intent upon saving something of its program of world price lifting.

A tentative resolution calling upon the various powers to use whatever means their local conditions will permit to lift prices to a point sufficient to restore the economic balance was understood to have been completed and cabled to Washington for approval. It was understood the hope was held the resolution might be introduced in the conference by the middle of the week.

Little hope remained, however, of inducing much of the world to take aggressive steps even remotely resembling those taken in the United States, it was believed in many conference circles.

Nevertheless, some well informed American and British quarters have thought that insistence of the dominions would bring a cautious and gradual lowering of the value of the British pound sterling in terms of the gold currencies.

In view of the flat rejection by Walter Runciman, president of the British board of trade, of the public works program introduced by the French intended to revive trade and lift prices, the Americans have little hopes that their suggestions along that line would have any wide effect.

With members of the gold bloc expressing a deep suspicion of credit expansion, informed circles said that course seemed unlikely to be widely

Survivors Tell of Fight for Lives In Heavy Seas on Blazing Tanker

By PAUL SIMMONS.
CHARLESTON, S. C., July 16.—(AP)—A story of a day-long battle against flames on their blazing oil tanker in a heavy sea, whipped by a strong wind, and finally rescued, was brought to this port today by 36 survivors of the Cities Service Petrol.

They left behind Captain F. L. Sears, of Dennis, Mass., master of the tanker, and George R. Binnering, of Indianapolis, Ind., a wiper, who went down when the vessel sank late Friday night off the North Carolina coast.

Captain Sears refused to enter a lifeboat and went down with his ship. Binnering perished in the explosion, of undetermined origin, that started the fire about 9:30 Friday morning. He was trapped by a bursting steam pipe in the ice room.

The survivors were brought just outside the harbor by the tanker Gulf Gem and the steamer Trimountain, which reached the doomed Petrol at nightfall Friday after the officers and crew had battled the flames all day.

The first explosion, they said, tore away the tanker's wireless and it was impossible to summon aid.

Ten survivors all uninjured except for slight burns and bruises, were removed from the Trimountain by the tug Cecilia, of Charleston. Twenty-six others, including two seriously injured, were transferred from the Gulf Gem to a coast guard patrol boat, which landed them here at 9 o'clock this morning.

followed. Marketing and production control, which the French have insisted is the only effective method of price lifting, also seemed unlikely of any tangible result save in the silver and wheat discussion, which still remained outside the province of the world economic parity.

Nevertheless, the Americans were reluctant to abandon the price-raising program without achieving a further acceptance of the general principles inasmuch as higher prices have been the very core of the American program.

The Americans have been won over to the British week-end idea, and the activity of the American headquarters came close to a standstill.

Ralph Tuggle Is Struck
Dead at C. C. C. Camp
Near McRae.

Struck by lightning, Ralph Tuggle, 28-year-old Atlantan, was killed Sunday afternoon at the civilian conservation corps camp near McRae. He resided at 215 Winter avenue, N. E.

Tuggle, with several companions, was on the bank of a swimming pool at the forestry camp situated several miles from McRae. During a windstorm, which was accompanied by an electrical display, Tuggle was sitting on a tin chub. The lightning struck the metal above his head and glanced off, hitting him. His neck was broken.

The Atlantan had been in the C. C. C. little more than a week, having been sent to McRae several days ago. Officers of the camp said he was one of the most popular members of the company. He possessed a good voice and entertained the forestry workers nightly with songs. He had many friends in Atlanta.

And yet I smoke steadily—all I want to—without disturbing my nerves. That's because I prefer Camels. There is no question but that they are milder. And their rich, inviting flavor seems to say, 'Have another.'"

Turn to Camels. Like Mr. Neu you will find that Camels are milder...that their flavor suits your taste...that steady smoking never jangles your nerves. So begin today!

ists even in Europe is pointed out by the Louisville Courier-Journal, which is published by Ambassador Bingham, which cites that in the English house of commons debate President Roosevelt was given what amounted of an overwhelming vote of confidence, with "all parties praising the courage and initiative of the American chief executive."

The average American loves a brainy as well as a brave fight. It is apparent that both of these attributes are being exhibited by the president and the American delegation at London in meeting the developments of the conference.

THE COAL CODE.
Southern coal interests are calling attention to the fact that in the consideration of a code for the industry, under the provisions of the national industrial recovery bill, it is vitally important that consideration be given to the handicap of discriminatory freight rates which the southern mines have had to combat for more than a decade.

In 1910 southern coal fields, located in eastern Kentucky, southern West Virginia, Virginia and eastern Tennessee, had to pay only nine cents more per ton for the transportation of their products to lake ports than did their northern competitors in northern West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

Now this differential, despite the fact that the southern fields are located not materially more distant from the various markets than are the northern mines, has reached a minimum of 35 cents per ton and, in some instances, is as high as 53 cents—increases of from 350 to 500 per cent in 23 years.

Southern coal is faced with a practically prohibitive handicap in the markets of Pennsylvania, Delaware, New Jersey, New York and the New England states because of a $4.10 a ton higher freight rate than is paid to the same markets on coal from West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

It follows that if, in setting up a new code of wages under the industrial recovery bill equal wage levels are ordered in the two fields, southern mines will be forced out of business if, at the same time, the discriminatory freight rates are not abolished.

These rates are an unfair and unjust handicap to the southern mines, and it is proper that, in this instance at least, the consideration of a new code for an individual industry should be accompanied by a readjustment of relations with still another industry.

The handicap of higher rates has been largely overcome by the southern fields through the payment of lower wages. If, under the new code, the wages are raised to a parity with those of their favored competitors, and no adjustment is made in the freight rate situation, many mines in the south will be forced to shut down to avoid operating at a loss.

Since one of the prime objectives of the industrial recovery bill is to furnish more employment, the new code would, without a fair adjustment of the present discriminatory freight rates, defeat its own end, so far as the southern fields are concerned. Instead of resulting in more employment, thousands of miners now at work would lose their jobs.

The recovery bill is broad enough in its provisions to permit fair consideration of this problem, and that this will be done is not to be doubted. Either wages in the southern fields must be lower than those elsewhere, or the discriminatory rates must be abolished.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW
BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

Quakers.
Recently I traveled in the company of Quakers, two distinguished Dutch medical men who had been over to Germany to see what they could do to alleviate distress among Jews in that country and they invited me to one of their meetings in The Hague. One of the men I had traveled with spoke at that meeting of what he had seen in Germany. He did not blame, he did not grow indignant, he did not censor. He merely told the story of his observations. And a poignant story it was. And then a discussion followed. But none of the speakers harped upon evil. They merely debated that practical relief might be organized. That is all they were concerned about.

To Quakers it does not matter who is in distress or what produced the distress, or even whether the Jews in distress are themselves to blame for their condition, which I do not mean to apply to the conditions of the Jews in Germany, of course. That is a social issue in distress, whether he is a bolshevik or a nazi or a Hottentot, that is enough for the Quakers. They take no sides and are impartial. The test is: Is he human being? Is he a brother? The rest doesn't matter.

Excellent basis of action. Most excellent and truly Christian, surely.

Archbishop On Russia.
The clergy of the Church of England, in solemn assembly, heard the Archbishop of York discuss the formation of life in the world and its challenge to the moral standing of Christianity. The world today, said the prelate, is directly concerned with the vast experiment in social reconstruction which is being carried on in soviet Russia. Many were frankly horrified at many of the things that had taken place in the course of that experiment. Many were conscious that the policy on which the experiment is based is defective and in practice false. But it ought also to be remembered, he added, that in the minds of those who are conducting the experiment its basis was a moral challenge to the state of society in the rest of the world.

"It is not enough for us to say that the Russian experiment is based upon false principles," said the archbishop. "It is the duty of the church to ask if there is any real moral foundation for the challenge, and if there is, to try to meet it. We must use the methods by which we can so order our lives that we might be free from censure when the challenge is presented."

The archbishop said frankly that there was a real reason to censure Christian endeavor at the present time. It, and not Russia, was responsible for much of the evil in the world at present.

Doctor Dollfus.
The cartoon in the London papers showing two men looking into a bath in a hotel-room and telling the manager, upon his anxious inquiry, that they were looking for Dr. Dollfus, the Austrian chancellor, intimating that he might have slipped down the drain, is of course but a joke. But the cartoon is authentic. It gives a real idea of the eminent statesman's diminutive size. Dr. Dollfus was in Rome not long ago and was invited to holy communion in the pope's private apartments. Now the pope is slightly myopic. Suddenly the pope said, "I don't think this was at the moment, but so my informant says, was suddenly the pope said: 'Please rise, Dr. Dollfus,' and the chancellor, quite astonished, came back: 'But I am on my feet, Holy Father.'"

DAY BY DAY
In Georgia's History

One hundred and ninety-four years ago today General James Oglethorpe set out to attend the great annual convocation and council of the Muscogee Indians on the Chattahoochee river at Coweta, Georgia.

On July 20, 1864, what great battle was fought at Atlanta?

For the two best 15-word original answers to the foregoing question, Loew's Grand theater, in connection with the co-operation, will award two pairs of guest tickets to see "Storm at Daybreak." Answers must be mailed to the Day by Day Editor, The Constitution, not later than midnight tomorrow.

"Storm at Daybreak" is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, starring Kay Francis, Neil Patrick Harris, Walter Huston. This picture started a week's run at the Grand Theatre.

Today's winners: Mrs. Lillian Stevens, 418 N. 10th street, N. E.; C. A. Reed, 130 Eleventh street, N. E. Guest tickets are mailed to the winners each day.

Health Talks
BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY

THE PORTAL SYSTEM.
Birds have approximately a pound of blood for ten pounds of body weight. Dogs have a pound of blood to 15 pounds of body weight. Man has a pound of blood for each 14 to 15 pounds of weight. Approximately a quart of your gallon of blood is in your liver, and nearly another quart in the veins that convey blood from the esophagus, stomach, intestines, spleen and pancreas to the liver. All this blood collected from the alimentary tract enters the liver through the portal vein and seeps through the spaces between the cells of which the great gland is composed. After the blood has seeped through these so-called "capillaries" it is again collected into veins and carried on by the great vein (vena cava) to the right side of the heart, which then pumps it through the lungs.

Accompanying the process of eating (smelling, seeing, tasting, chewing, swallowing and digestion of food) there is a normal engorgement or congestion of the portal system, the liver. It is only with overeating, too hasty eating, unnatural stimulation of the sense or apparatus of digestion, or the use of condiments and highly spiced foods that this engorgement of the portal system becomes abnormal. It explains how overeating aggravates or predisposes to stiffness of the nose and throat or the various chronic troubles jumbled under the meaningless name of "catarrhal trouble." It explains how the sponge expands and draws fresh blood in from the veins of stomach and intestine and esophagus. Thus this natural manner of breathing, belching, burping, etc., which is a normal general circulation but also aids the portal system and improves the function of the liver. Not any kind of "breath holding" exercise, but only the natural way of breathing, which I call belly breathing. Detailed in nose, of course.

News Behind the News
By Paul Mallon.

DISPLAY WASHINGTON, July 16.—Men at the top here are mulling over a little fireworks scheme for the final week of the London conference.

They may display it as a grand finale statement from President Roosevelt. Or it may be offered to public gaze in last-minute resolutions adopted in the conference.

The idea is to send the London delegates home with a good taste in their mouths. Promises may be offered on currency-adjustments and tariffs. Great aid is expected.

If you will read between the lines, you will see the promises do not involve any change in American policy.

GRASS-ROOTS The problem is largely political. We cannot afford to let the town statesmen go home feeling must be held out.

At least that is the reasoning of those trying to push President Roosevelt into making the gesture.

The word was passed down the line in the choicest inner-circle because all sorts of reports were flying around Wall Street. These reports suggested we might peg the dollar with the pound. Also that stabilization might be offered each country individually.

Such things are coming, but not until our domestic situation is on a stable basis. You can bank on that.

TARIFFS The way we are now starting tariff concession talks with certain foreign nations is a good example of the new inside strategy we are following internationally.

The nations wanted to confer with us. Argentina, Norway and others have asked for conferences. We have made a great display of assenting. The publicity put out by government press agents indicates agreements are just around the corner.

It is the same corner Mr. Hoover thought prosperity was around.

The underlying truth is that foreign nations want concessions. We are not in a position to grant them. To do so would interfere with our domestic recovery program now. Furthermore Mr. Roosevelt has no power to grant anything. Congress declines to give him the power.

But there is no harm in conferring. It softens the blow we gave the world when we announced our nationalistic policy at London. Also the results will ultimately be useful. They can be submitted to congress by Mr. Roosevelt in January. The congress can then act on them for a few months more. By that time, we may be in a position to do something important about tariffs.

Don't hold your breath waiting for that day.

PUBLICITY A clique of liberals started the move to break up General Johnson's high-powered publicity machine.

They held a dinner recently at the home of a former Washington newspaperman. Among the guests was Edward McGrawdy. He is labor assistant in the Johnson outfit.

The guests (mostly newspapermen) turned on the heat immediately. They spared no words in criticizing the publicity work of General Johnson's machine. Mr. McGrawdy called General Johnson on the telephone and asked him to come over.

The guests and the host told the general the same story. He broke down and confessed he was not getting the kind of publicity he wanted. He suggested that those present name someone he could appoint to fill the bill as a contact man between himself and the press.

"They named two men. Both are Washington correspondents, one for a press association and the other for a nearby democratic newspaper.

It looked a deal was about to be made until the next day. The two men found that some of the publicity jobs paid as little as $3,000 a year. That was bad minimum wage even for liberals accustomed to getting along without pay.

The result was that someone suggested General Johnson drop the steel industry code and adopt one for publicity men.

The matter was still in the process of negotiations at last accounts.

REPEAL A certain dry senator says he does not believe the dries will carry a single state in the repeal referendum.

He formerly advised the dry organizations on politics and should know.

He says they were counting on Kansas until recently. Now they do not believe a vote will be authorized there before two-thirds of the states act (probably November 8).

The senator recently made a tour through his own formerly dry state. He came back and beat a suit of clothes that it would go wet by 100,000.

NOTES Repeal will change the tax source of about $200,000,000 immediately. That much revenue was expected from November 8. These include the new normal taxes on stock dividends, the net worth stock tax and one-half cent of the increase on gasoline. Repeal will not affect the electrical tax, the increase in postal rates or the original federal gasoline tax.

There is some talk about General Johnson demanding a code from bankers, but nothing is being done on it yet and probably nothing will be.

"Sister" Dal is the latest member of the Roosevelt family to enter the literary racket. She wrote a letter to the junior page of one of the local newspapers, but received no money for it. She explained her brother "Buz" was too young to write. Some of the radio brokers are thinking about signing him to a broadcasting contract where reading and writing are not essential.

Before You Pity the Caged Wolf, Go Pity the Sheep He Killed
By Robert Quillen

It is almost an impossibility to judge any matter fairly until both sides are heard.

A widow with small children to support has no capital except her home and $5,000 worth of bank stock. The stock brings her an income sufficient to buy bread and butter and she feels secure.

But the bank fails. The stock loses all value. And the law requires the widow, as one of the owners of the bank, to pay another $5,000 to help make up the loss.

She is unable to find the money, the law takes her home. She is made a pauper and her children are fed by charity.

But another widow with small children to support has no capital except $5,000 that represents her husband's life insurance. The money is deposited in the bank. And when the bank closes it is lost.

What does this second widow say of the law?

When the bank's stockholders are assessed 100 per cent and the money thus obtained is sufficient to repay the depositors only 20 cents on the dollar, she says to her neighbors: "The law is cruel and unjust. Those rich bank owners who were $4,000 of my money and the law should force them to make it good if it takes everything they have."

Consider another case.

A man free born and white works with pick and shovel under a blazing July sun. He is clothed in stripes, and a short chain fastened to his ankles reduces his stride to a hobbled shuffle. He sleeps at night in a wheeled cage, where he is chained to 20 fellow prisoners who curse him when he moves.

He is fed cornbread, grease gravy, fat pork, and, at intervals, coffee. The state spends twice as much to feed a mule.

Hard men guard him with loaded guns as he works. When despair and bitterness make him desperate and he refuses to work more, he is locked in stocks or a wooden cell called a sweat-box. If he becomes sullen and defiant, he is whipped. And this agony he must endure until he dies.

He says the law is brutal and merciless.

But one summer evening three years ago this man, being drunk, as he frequently was, and brutal as always when drunk, entered a neighbor's yard to pick a quarrel. Urged to leave, he drew a gun. In the struggle that followed, one wild shot struck the neighbor's wife, shattering her elbow; a second blinded his five-year-old daughter; the third and last killed him.

No punishment of the killer can bring the dead back to life or lessen the suffering of the crippled woman or make life endurable for the blind and disabled child. And brutal punishment, however much deserved, shames the state that permits it.

But prisons and chain gangs are not Sunday schools. Their purpose is to confine and control evil and dangerous men who cannot be trusted at large.

If they deal too severely with slight offenders, the fault is not in them but in the law that dooms a trespasser or the decent victim of chance to share the punishment of an inhuman killer.

HOLLYWOOD. July 16.—The rage for cornflower blue and white has been started by the brunet members of the colony—notably Claudette Colbert and Adrienne Ames. You can do this in a number of ways. Green linen sandals completed the picture.

Alice White breaks into the autumn mode with a black satin suit, so slick and tight and shiny that she looks as if she had been dropped bodily into a tar barrel. To complete this bizarre costume there is a Spanish sailor, flat as a pancake, made of black patent leather and clasped over her curls by means of an elastic band. This is the mode for the small girl who is water-slim. If you have the courage to do it, the public will stare—and how!

Miriam Hopkins is wearing her flowers at the center back of her low necklines these nights. A cluster of red carnations at the waistline of a pale blue crepe frock was very effective. And a white chignon dress, also cut to the waistline, had a knot of cornflowers.

Blondes are going in for pink and green and for combinations of the two colors—never so chic as this season. A tall, slim blonde dancing the other night at the Colony was wearing a magenta-brown dress. Her dress gingham had apple green and candy pink striping. The stripes were

Pardoned Gem Thief Is Slain by Police

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 16.—(AP)—Leo Vincent Rotella, given 30 years at hard labor in 1927 for robbery of a jewelry store and later pardoned, was shot and killed last night in a gun battle with police.

Officers said they answered a call to quell disturbance at the home of Henry F. Luting. As two of the policemen flashed their lights at a rear door, they said Rotella opened fire and shot off a shot. One of the officers returned the fire but missed.

Rotella then went to the front of the house, they said, and was about to shoot at Patrolman A. W. Sweet when the latter fired first. Rotella died at a hospital. None of the officers was wounded.

2 Atlanta Hold-Ups Reported to Police

Two white men were robbed of $70 in two holdups perpetrated by five negroes Sunday night, according to police reports.

J. D. Graham, of 508 Plum street, was robbed of $40 at Poplar and Broad street by two negroes, he reported, while J. R. Willis, manager of a drug store at 101 Forrest avenue, was robbed of $30 in cash by three negroes. Willis said the negroes were armed and appeared to be about 16 years of age.

building, electrical manufacturers, clock and suit makers, men's wear manufacturers and wool sweater makers. Early hearings on various codes have been scheduled. On Wednesday the shipbuilding and electrical codes will be taken up, and on Thursday lumber and the clock and suit codes, and on Monday week the petroleum industry's plans and the codes for wool and men's wear.

In a few days dates will be set for coal and steel, which, with oil and lumber, represent the country's biggest basic raw material production.

There is some talk to begin here one of the most remarkable developments of the industrial recovery movement. Bituminous coal producers from the north and south, who for years have been in bitter competition, are working with the idea of presenting a joint code.

Nothing like this had been expected by Johnson. The two groups, both non-union, have framed separate codes but insist they believe seriously they can get together. One coal code already is in from the unionized fields, but the groups meeting tomorrow control 70 per cent of the country's bituminous tonnage.

ICKES LAYS DOWN RULES TO CONTROL OIL PRODUCTION

WASHINGTON, July 16.—(UP)—Secretary of the Interior Ickes tonight laid down drastic regulations to drive outlaws from the oil industry and to keep the production of petroleum in a close balance with the needs of the nation.

He struck at an evil about which petroleum producers have been complaining for months—the shipment of "hot" oil, that is, oil that has been produced or shipped in violation of the various state laws.

Ickes laid down rules for the control of transporting petroleum and its products—oil, pipe lines, by water and by trucks. Every person engaged in any phase of petroleum production is made liable to punishment for violation of the rules. This includes producers, lessees, operators and royalty owners.

The federal government will compel oil men to submit data on production regardless of whether the oil is to be shipped in interstate or intrastate commerce or whether it is designed for foreign markets.

THREE PERSONS HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

Automobile accidents Sunday sent three persons to Grady hospital emergency clinic for treatment. Mrs. A. E. Smallwood, of 296 Boulevard, S. E., treated for slight injuries, reported that she was riding in a car which was driven into an embankment near Panola Shoals in DeKalb county by Felt Anderson, of Atlanta, in an effort to avoid a collision with another machine.

Daniel Hudson, of Broad and Marietta streets, was struck by a car driven by Sam Scott, negro, of 343 Ashby street, at Broad and Marietta, and was treated at Grady for bruises and lacerations. No case was made.

Miss Gertrude Huckaby, of Riverside, was injured about the head and shoulders, when an automobile in which she was riding, driven by W. B. Ware, of 521 Turner place, collided with a car driven by A. T. Hemminger, of 245 Woodward street, according to police. Cases of reckless driving were made against both drivers.

Wages Are Boosted By Textile Code

WASHINGTON, July 16.—(AP)—Here are the new wage-boosting, hour-shortening regulations under which the country's cotton textile mills start operating tomorrow, and to which rayon and silk spinners and weavers are expected to subscribe:

A maximum of 40 hours a week working time for any employee, even though he works for two or more employers.

A minimum wage of $12 a week in the south and $13 in the north.

Limitation of machine hours to 80 hours (two shifts of 40 hours).

Prohibition of the hiring of children under 16 years of age.

Prohibition of increasing the number of machines a worker is required to operate under the so-called "stretch out" system.

Periodical filing of reports by members of the Cotton Textile Institute on wages, hours, production and consumption.

Payment of time and a half for overtime work by repair shop crews, engineers and maintenance men, and crews who are outside the maximum hours restrictions.

Inclusion of office employees in all benefits of the code, and maintenance of the existing ratio by which wages in the higher-paid classes, up to workers receiving $30 a week, exceed wages in the lower-paid classes.

Exception of cleaners and outside workers pending submission by January 1, 1934, by the industry's planning and supervisory committee of a schedule of minimum wages and maximum hours for them.

Working out, by the same date, of a plan looking to eventual employee home-ownership in "mill villages," especially in the south.

Exemption from the machine hour limit for only three weeks of plants producing yarns of fabrics for rubber tires.

Application of the minimum wage to piece-workers as well as those of time basis.

The Warrens were en route to Atlanta when a car came out of a side road, police said they were informed. The Warren's car, driven by Mrs. A. C. BIG BLACK BEAR INJURES KEEPER AT ATLANTA ZOO

After six years of almost daily association with a big black bear at the Grant Park zoo, E. C. Nelson, 57, of 679 Burns street, was attacked and severely injured by the animal Sunday afternoon while cleaning the cage. Nelson said he entered the cage every day and the bear showed no tendencies toward ferociousness. Sunday, without warning, the animal knocked him down, sat on him, and began chewing on his right leg, he said. Having been told that the only way to save himself in such a situation was to grasp the bear's tongue, Nelson put his hand in the animal's mouth and grabbed.

He got the tongue and the bear got up and backed away, but not before severely biting his keeper's hand. Nelson was treated at Grady hospital.

Union Veteran Denies Lightning Opened Spring at Andersonville

SAN JOSE, Cal., July 16.—(AP)—Not a bolt of lightning, but shovels in the hands of slaves, opened a spring in Andersonville prison, Georgia, in the dark days of the Civil War, it was asserted today by William H. Lawrence, 85-year-old Union veteran. Lawrence made this statement in commenting on a dispatch from Americus, Ga., saying the spring, still flowing, had been opened by a stroke of lightning amid prisoners dying of thirst. The aged veteran said the true name of the spring was Providence spring, and that the soldiers in the prison camp were dying of disease and not of thirst. Lawrence said he entered the prison with about 100 others captured in Deer Mice. The mouse genus that the deer, or white-footed, mice belong to is the genus Peromyscus. Included within its limits are about 150 species and subspecies, according to the checklist of 1924. There are approximately seven species represented in Georgia, and we say approximately because there is great need of study of these mice in this area.

Anything that we say about white-footed mice, therefore, must be general in scope, for we have no definite life-history data from Georgia. All that we know is what applies to the entire genus, and that is most superficial when we are talking about any one place. However, I want to indicate the need of some serious research in this direction.

From the tip of the nose to the tip of the well-haired tail, the white-footed mouse will measure about seven inches. Of this length, one-half is tail. They are dark brown above, with a yellow cast to the coat. Along the back, from the region of the shoulders to the tail, there is a darker band. The underparts are clear white, although if you will part this white fur, you will find that the basal pelage is gray. There is a sharp contrast of color in the back and belly of these mice, the dark top side and the light underside extending even to the tip of the tail. Literally, there are dozens of variations of this basic pattern, so don't expect the first one you find to fit this description, and don't get excited over a new species if it doesn't. The limits of variation for any species are difficult to define; particularly is this true in the case of white-footed mice. It may surprise you to know that these mice are very abundant. The fact that you have never seen one is probably due to the corresponding fact that they are nocturnal, and spend daylight asleep in their nests.

There are from three to seven of these mice to the litter, and as many as four litters may be produced per year. Seton has estimated that they breed at the age of three or four months. With such remarkable capabilities, is it any wonder that they are abundant? They do have, on the other hand, many enemies, not the least of which are the birds of prey. Owls doubleless account for numbers of the white-footed mice in the course of a year.

These mice are credited with the ability to sing a sustained, canary-like song, but I have never heard it myself.

Tomorrow: Velvet Ants.

FARLEY URGES YOUTH TO BACK F. D. R. PLANS

Postmaster General Appeals to Democrats to Carry Program to People.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 16.—(AP)—Postmaster General James A. Farley wound up a busy southern visit today, addressing a breakfast gathering of young democrats in the morning and attending a baseball game in the afternoon.

In-between-times, Mr. Farley found time for an interview in which he praised President Roosevelt for drawing upon the talent of the south in organizing the official government at Washington.

"President Roosevelt," he said, "did not take the attitude that since the south is safe for the democratic party southern democrats need be given no further consideration."

Mr. Farley and his party were the guests of President John D. Martin, of the Southern Association of Baseball Clubs, at the Memphis-Birmingham double-header here this afternoon.

Repeal Seen. Prediction that repeal of the 18th amendment would be effected before the end of 1933 was made by Mr. Farley last night in an address directed specifically to Tennessee, Arkansas and Alabama where referendum elections will be held this week. An audience in excess of 8,000 persons heard the address.

Mr. Farley did not mention repeal of prohibition in his speech to the young democrats this morning, but called upon the young democrats to carry the Roosevelt program direct to the people.

Inform People. "The president wants you to help him inform the people about his program," Mr. Farley said. "You young democrats are not sticklers for precedent, and we will look to you to help us explain these great plans which have been charted through an unexplored territory of governmental action."

"In the short space of four months," the postmaster general said, "we have seen a great nation lifted from the depths of despair and placed on the road to a recovery which may be slow, but is nevertheless certain."

"I attribute this remarkable change to two causes. First, to the leadership and wisdom of the man for

Funeral services are to be held Tuesday at the Sacred Heart church, of which she was a member. Burial will be in Oakland cemetery. Sam Greenberg & Co. will announce the time of the rites.

Slow Poison..

It's the constant seeping into the system that makes this condition your most relentless enemy

If you had a poison ivy infection or had been bitten by a poisonous insect you would do something about it right away. Yet every doctor has seen people neglect the slow, relentless intestinal poisoning that comes from constipation. These internal toxins seep into the system and undermine the strongest constitution.

Yet so many people think "any kind of laxative" will take care of this condition! It's not true. To get rid of the poisons your laxative must be thorough in its action. But it must also be safe. And that's the important difference between Feen-a-mint and the ordinary laxatives. Feen-a-mint simply has to be chewed. As naturally as food its laxative ingredient is carried by the saliva to the intestinal tract—and evenly distributed. Consequently Feen-a-mint is thorough in action yet it is safe from the irritations caused by concentrated laxatives. It contains no habit-forming drugs nor does it leave the unpleasant after-effects that are so often the cause of a chronic need for the old-fashioned laxatives. Your druggist has Feen-a-mint. He, as well as your doctor can tell you how well a precaution it is to keep a box always on hand.

PEOPLE like Mr. Stevens understand why we carry "details" so far. Four rings per piston instead of three. Four crankshaft bearings. Full pressure lubrication—not hit-or-miss splash!

Those things are good engineering. Of course they're details—when you compare them in importance with Floating Power engine mountings—hydraulic brakes—safety-steel bodies.

But details count—and we'd like you to see how much. "Look at all three"...and see for yourself why Plymouth is growing so fast.

POST IN PRUSSIA ON WORLD FLIGHT

Lithuanians Missing in Attempt to Fly to Na- tion's Capital.

a. m., eastern standard time Saturday.

Flying sometimes as high as 11,000 feet, Post declared that he raced through bad weather over a large part of his trip.

Seems Exhausted.

The stocky, little, grimy and deaf from the prolonged roar of the motor, appeared exhausted as he climbed limply from his plane, the Winnie Mae of Oklahoma, at Tempelhof airfield. A band was playing the "Star-Spangled Banner."

He climbed wearily from his plane, helped by a policeman, but he smiled as he tried to pull himself together as he faced the welcoming officials and a group of newspapermen.

Steel-helmeted nazi troopers armed with rifles kept a crowd of 2,000 spectators back.

After the formal greeting ceremonies, Post was hurried to a hotel room, where he was braced by a cold shower bath, under which he stood for nearly 20 minutes.

Supervises Refueling.

Then the Oklahoma aviator returned to Tempelhof, where he supervised the taking of 2,000 liters of gasoline (about 525 gallons) and a supply of motor oil. About half of the latter was placed in special containers for the Oklahoma declared that he had encountered nasty weather during his flight and that it had required four hours more than he anticipated to reach Berlin. While declining to go into details, he said he was perfectly satisfied with the operation of the pilot installed in the Winnie Mae.

During the refueling operations Post climbed into the cabin of his ship. He fell asleep while the work was under way, since it proceeded slowly, there being no automatic pumps available. The flyer was visibly annoyed at the failure of the oil company which refueled the ship to supply an electric pump.

In Good Shape.

Mechanics who serviced the ship said they found both it and the flying instruments in excellent shape.

Post received a letter from his wife, Mrs. Post, who was in Moscow, but he declared that he intended to proceed north of the soviet union capital.

He ran the entire length of the field in taking off, turned westward for a time and then circled back toward the east, rapidly disappearing in that direction.

WEATHER DELAYS POST AT KOENIGSBERG, GERMANY

Koenigsberg, Germany, July 17.—(AP)—Post's flight to Berlin was delayed by weather conditions. The flyer was visibly annoyed at the failure of the oil company which refueled the ship to supply an electric pump.

Post already had crossed the soviet Russian frontier when he returned owing to bad visibility.

At dawn, Post arose to resume his interrupted flight to Novo-Sibirsk, Siberia, only to find rain and overcast skies. He had gone to bed immediately upon arriving last night.

Post reportedly he again intended to head pending the arrival of weather reports from Moscow.

An airport official described flying weather as "quite bad," but said Post looked thoroughly recovered from the fatigue of his trans-Atlantic venture and the solo flyer's plane was ready to proceed.

The official denied reports that the plane's oil line had been damaged.

POST FLIGHT TO BERLIN SETS RECORD FOR SPEED

NEW YORK, July 16.—(AP)—Wiley Post's nonstop flight from New York to Berlin, which he completed today, was the fastest ever made between the two cities.

The Oklahoma flew the 3,900 miles in 25 hours, 45 minutes, an average of about 150 miles an hour.

The previous New York-Berlin record had been held by Jimmy Martin and Bennett Griffin, who covered the distance in a flying time of 29 hours 18 minutes on their ill-fated attempt to encircle the globe last summer. Their elapsed time was 31 hours 30 minutes because of a stop at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland.

Post and Harold Gatty flew from New York to Berlin in 1931, in three stops, in 34 hours 34 minutes.

TWO LITHUANIAN AVIATORS MISSING ON LONG FLIGHT

NEW YORK, July 16.—(AP)—Two Lithuanian aviators who started on a 4,900-mile flight to their native land without governmental permission were unreported tonight after they were due at their goal.

The orange and black monoplane of Captain Stephen Darius and Stanley Girens, who hoped off from Floyd Bennett field an hour after Wiley Post's departure, was last heard over the east coast of Newfoundland at 2:38 p. m. Saturday morning, when it landed, heading for the Atlantic.

From Newfoundland the fliers' route lay over the ocean to the northern tip of Scotland, then across the

Wiley Post Details Events Of New York-Berlin Hop

By WILEY POST.
Round-the-World Solo Pilot.
(Copyright, 1933, by the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)
BERLIN, July 16.—(By Wireles) With good weather and perfect refueling arrangements, the route to slip you along, a solo flight around the world would be a cinch. So far, both on this and my previous flight, I have not been favored with either, and while I had hoped to do the stretch between Bennett Field and Tempelhof in 22 hours, yet really I should not grumble.

I have been a comparatively easy flight so far, thanks to Winnie Mae and her playmates—the robot pilot, the Wasp engine and directional radio control. If Winnie behaves as well as she has, the weather will be a right now that I will see the sidewalks of New York again next Friday.

I got into a mess of dirty weather three miles out of Tempelhof Saturday morning, and it stuck to me for an hour and a half. Toward Nova Scotia, I had to battle head and cross wind. The weather was all right good and bad after I got into the open reaches of the North Atlantic, but thick weather awaited me over Ireland and England. I bucked it rather than attempt to fly over it.

The flight over Holland and west Germany to Berlin was easy. I flew gently rose to 10,000 feet, but flew less than half that altitude over the sea. I saw land only while traveling over Newfoundland and skirting Ireland. My speed averaged 100 miles an hour, and right here I want to put in a good word for my automatic pilot, which I called "Winnie Mae."

My receiving radio supplied me with weather bulletins from British broadcasting stations. Winnie was considerably easier when Harold Gatty and I flew her over the same stretch two years ago last month. Picking up a directional beam from the Manchester station soon after I passed Cape Race, and driving across the Atlantic, accordingly, all that remained for me to do was sit and watch it.

I did not sleep a wink all the way over, and while I may look a bit fagged, I am fit enough to fly on to Novo-Sibirsk. I had hoped to make Moscow before sunset today, but was disappointed in the refueling accommodation provided for me here. It took two hours instead of 20 minutes to refuel. I will have to recover the loss between here and points east, although Tempelhof weather prophets warn me of storms ahead in "East" they promise me clear weather after that, far up into Siberia.

But I can't help reverting to Winnie. She's behaved loyally and bravely so far. She's built for speed, power and economy, and even the mechanics at Tempelhof airfield marveled at her fit condition after a long drive across the Atlantic. Not a gadget was out of order.

I had 50 gallons of gasoline left when I landed at Tempelhof and I am reloading up to the hilt for my crossing to Novo-Sibirsk. My robot pilot behaved marvelously throughout the flight and kept me on a level course.

I had a bit of adventure when I was forced up to 11,000 feet to clear a storm center soon after leaving Cape Race behind. I hit hail and sleet only once, and after continuing at 11,000 feet for a long period I decided to climb down early in the morning. I figured I must be approaching the Irish coast. I ran into another batch of thick weather over England, but decided to fly through the Channel and Holland, the flight up to Berlin was uneventful and I was soon happy to find myself again taxiing down Tempelhof field.

The planes and sweeping them with searchlights. Near-by on the pier stand hundreds of drums of gasoline and oil for refueling the ships for their homeward journey.

General Balbo took time out to draft a reply to the message of congratulation received from Premier Mussolini. When his men were not being feted, they kept close to their rooms in the Drake hotel. They took their meals in their rooms, feeling it brave admiring throngs that filled the dining rooms hoping to catch sight of them.

The hotel's Italian telephone operators were busy, receiving congratulations and queries concerning the fliers from thousands of persons here and over the nation.

LINDBERGH SPEND QUIET DAY IN LABRADOR

CARTWRIGHT, Labrador, July 16.—(AP)—Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, preparing to survey possible air routes across the north Atlantic, spent a quiet week-end here.

They arrived last week-end on an easy flight by stages from New York. Over the week-end they visited the Hudson's Bay station, the Italian supply ship Alice, which was anchored here to service General Italo Balbo's squadron of 24 seaplanes on his flight to Chicago and the Grenfell mission.

POST TALKS WITH WIFE OVER ATLANTIC PHONE

(Copyright, 1933, by the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)
NEW YORK, July 16.—Wiley Post, at the airport of Koenigsberg, knocked off preparing his plane for the next jump long enough to chat with his wife over the trans-Atlantic telephone. He also had a few words with Lee Trenholm, his representative here.

Post said he had five hours' sleep, that the weather was bad, but that he was going on to Novo-Sibirsk as soon as the plane was ready. He said the flying was easy, but that he had had a rough time of it.

"I have had five hours' restful sleep," Post said, "and that means I won't have to sleep at Novo-Sibirsk or Khabarovsk."

Trenholm informed him that preparations for every aid had been made at Fairbanks and Edmonton, and the fliers such as he suffered at Berlin would not be repeated.

"That's great," answered the flyer. "Are you going to sleep at Novo-Sibirsk?" he was asked.

He answered, "No," and added that he would not sleep at Khabarovsk.

In answer to another question, Post said he had given no thought to the possibility of being shot down, but that he had heard they took off in Berlin.

Both Trenholm and Mrs. Post said the flyer seemed happy and eager to go on.

"Wiley talked just as if he had made a short hop from Chicago and was getting ready to come in from the field," said Mrs. Post.

WOMAN LINKED IN KIDNAP HUNT

sided at 565 Northeast Sixty-fifth street, in an apartment house. He stated that the house is being watched, and asked that a photograph of Delenski be forwarded. A police circular bearing the photograph and police record of the fugitive was sent to Miami late Sunday.

Almost the first question asked by the police when the search got under way was concerned with the man's soul brother, But Pryor, 20-year-old lawyer (Ga.) boy who drove the kidnaping car and later helped Mr. Ottley gain his freedom. He insisted that during the few days he had associated with Delenski, whom he knew as Collins, there had been no mention of a woman.

Delenski's police record contains the notation that he served a sentence at Blackwell's Island in New York city in 1929 after conviction on a charge of abducting. During the time he was known to young Bowen as Collins and stayed in Bowen's company almost constantly he seems to have not associated with women.

When his identity as Delenski was established the police were prepared to learn more about the man.

Although police interest shifted again to Miami, that city has the place of residence of Delenski's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Delenski, there was no diminishing of activity in the Atlanta area over the kidnapping. In the northeast residential section where residents have reported the movement of a "woman" whom they suspect of being a man disguised, look-outs were maintained.

An unnamed man caused the arrest Sunday afternoon of a 28-year-old man who gave the name M. C. Robinson, 5 p. m. The general then was arrested at the corner of Pryor and Goodwin streets, he told the police he had been in the city less than an hour, and had come looking for work.

Captain S. E. Woodson, of the police bureau of investigation, stated later that there appeared to be "nothing against" the man.

SYLVANIA R. R. AGENT DIES AT SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 16.—(AP)—R. R. Fields, 60, veteran agent of the Savannah and Atlanta railway at Sylvania, Ga., died of a heart attack while surf bathing at Savannah Beach this afternoon. For two hours and a half physicians and life guards sought to revive him. He is survived by his widow, three sons and a daughter.

LUER'S RELEASED BY KIDNAP BAND

day, and police would not disclose his whereabouts.

AGED BANKER RELEASED BY ILLINOIS ABDUCTORS

ALTON, Ill., July 16.—(AP)—Released by his kidnapers, a 77-year-old invalid banker, was returned to the home of a son here today where he was being kept under guard.

The elderly man, unshaven and dirty, but apparently unharmed, appeared early today at a roadside roadhouse near Collinsville, Ill. Members of the family said no ransom was paid. Luer was seized in his home Monday night.

Luer said he had been ejected from an automobile a mile or so distant and had made his way with difficulty to the resort after seeing the lights. He said three or four men were in the motor car when he was seized.

Members of the Luer family at Alton were notified and immediately informed state department of justice officials in southern Illinois began a widespread search for the kidnappers' lair. Construction men and builders also were asked to comb their memory for any building which may fit the description of the place Luer said he was imprisoned.

Dungeon Below.

The building approached by a heavy gravel or cobblestone drive, a hole in the floor leads to a basement. Another descent from the basement leads to a concrete dungeon 7 feet long, 4 feet wide and 3 1/2 feet high.

Sheriff Peter Fitzgerald, at Edwardsville, was tipped of the return of the missing man, and hurried to the Miller resort ahead of the department of justice men. Details of the kidnaping story, as related by the victim, were supplied by the sheriff who heard Luer's story before the arrival of the federal officers.

At the home of Herman Luer it was said this afternoon that the banker was sleeping and would not be disturbed.

The appearance of the abducted man surprised officers in view of a formal announcement made late last night by Lawrence Keller Jr., and Orville S. Catt, official kidnappers named by the Luer family.

The statement said notes had been received from the kidnappers, written and signed by August Luer, but had been found too late and were too complicated to permit compliance with the instructions. The kidnappers were urged in the statement to issue new instructions immediately. Approximately an hour later Luer was released.

Details Are Revealed.

Details of the abduction and release of the banker, as announced by Sheriff Fitzgerald after talking with the victim follow:

Upon being seized by two men and a woman who obtained entrance into the Luer home by a ruse last Monday night the banker, in his stocking feet, was dragged to a waiting motor car. The victim's wife had allowed one of the men kidnappers and the woman to enter the house when they requested to use the telephone.

Luer said he was forced to lie on the floor of the kidnapper's motor car and was driven for what he believed was about three hours. His eyes were taped immediately and sight was not permitted during the more than five days the banker was held prisoner. During the trip the banker said he got in and out of an automobile several times.

Placed in a truck, he was taken from the machine and conducted to an underground dungeon about four feet high. He could not see, but was forced to sit or recline during his imprisonment. The first two nights he slept on the hard concrete floor, later he was given an automobile cushion.

His food consisted almost entirely of ham sandwiches, which the banker ate sparingly because of fear of indigestion.

Last night Luer said he was informed he was to be released and was taken to an automobile and driven to the spot where he was ejected from the machine. He was told not to take the tape from his eyes for several minutes, but said he did not obey orders. The tape was found later today in the road by officers.

Relatives of the banker had feared he might not survive the kidnaping ordeal because of frequent heart attacks which he suffers and because he would not have medicine to treat the disease.

Luer said a bottle of pills he carried when he was seized was broken during a struggle with the abductors and most of the medicine lost. Later the kidnappers supplied additional pills and the banker took two doses.

TWO MEN ARE ARRESTED IN JOHN FACTOR CASE

CHICAGO, July 16.—(AP)—John O'Leary and Carl Fontana, convicted, were arrested today in connection with the kidnaping of John Factor, a speculator, who was held captive 12 days and freed last week after payment of $50,000 ransom.

The pair was seized at a Cicero hotel, former Capone stronghold. Factor was taken to the home of Captain Dan Gilbert, head of the kidnap detail of the state's attorney's office, and Melvin Purvis, of the federal bureau of investigation.

Factor was also summoned from his luxurious Pearson hotel apartment to look the prisoners over. He claimed previously, however, that he would be unable to identify any of his abductors.

O'Leary and Fontana, police revealed, have been sought for more than a year for the kidnaping of David Blumenthal, Chicago business man. Police also announced they are seeking other members of the O'Leary-Fontana combination including Lawrence Mongano, Ernest Rossi, Charles Brown, of St. Louis, and Verne Sankey.

The latter was held responsible by police for the recent kidnaping of William Hamm Jr., St. Paul brewer, and Charles Boettcher II, Denver broker.

A detail has instructions to pick up Harvey Bailey, who led the recent sensational jail break at Lansing, Kan., and Tommy O'Conner, Chicago killer, who escaped from jail here in 1921, four days before he was to have been hanged.

UNCLES OF O'CONNELL CONFIDENT OF SUCCESS

ALBANY, N. Y., July 16.—(AP)—Ed and Dan O'Connell, supposedly powerful uncles of John J. O'Connell Jr., continued unshaken today in their belief that direct dealing with the persons who abducted the youth nine days ago will restore him to his family soon. The O'Connells yesterday rejected an offer of official aid and

U. S. Girl Flyer To Aid Post As He Lands at Novosibirsk

NOVOSIBIRSK, Siberia, July 16.—(AP)—Waiting here to help Wiley Post when he arrives on his globe-circling solo flight is a 24-year-old American girl flyer, Fay Gillis.

She not only has made all refueling and rest arrangements, but will act as the aviator's interpreter during his brief halt at this far eastern outpost.

(Previous plans for Miss Gillis to fly from Novosibirsk to Khabarovsk, Siberia, with the pilot were canceled Sunday in New York by Lee Trenholm, Post's manager.)

Miss Gillis, one of the few women members of the Caterpillar Club—that exclusive group of fliers who have had to take to parachutes for their lives—has been here three weeks acting as Post's personal representative.

She has been telling local airport officials just what he will need in the way of food and fuel and has been getting everything in readiness to speed the Oklahoma's voyage over the last half of Russia.

They were all set now, she said today when told that Post had taken off for Berlin.

"The local air administration and the secretary of the district central executive committee here have done everything to facilitate his arrival and departure."

They have mowed the grass on the landing field, set aside a special room where he can rest at the airport, and even arranged a menu for the meal they will have ready for him."

She also has maps prepared especially for Post by civil aviation authorities in Moscow covering the route from Novosibirsk to Khabarovsk, and in addition will have ready a special weather forecast plotted by the local weather station.

Post told her he would stay at Novosibirsk two hours, sleeping while she supervised the refueling.

Miss Gillis, who has received every co-operation from soviet authorities, was allowed to fly here from Moscow on the regular mail plane, the first time any foreigner has been permitted to travel outside the regular passenger line.

She has been in soviet Russia three years with her father, mother and sister. Her father is employed as a consulting metallurgist by the soviet government. She claims New York as her home.

She first met Post and flew with him in the fall of 1931 when she made a visit of several months to the United States.

"I am saving my last piece of American soap for him, which he ought to appreciate," Miss Gillis said. "Among the supplies she has gathered here are two tons of gasoline and a half ton of oil, more than enough to fill the tanks of Post's plane."

They live with her sister, Beth, in Moscow, while her father and mother are away on an engineering job.

A geologist points to the need of a durable, transparent waterproofing substance to protect Greek temples and other famous stone ruins from the disintegrative action of water.

Farley Warns Public Of 'Tipster Sheets'

WASHINGTON, July 16.—(AP)—Warning investors against the use of stock market "tipster sheets," Postmaster-General Farley said today they are an encouragement to speculation and a handicap to industrial recovery.

He explained in a statement that the postoffice department cannot prevent persons from selling market advice unless fraud is employed, but added:

"I shall not hesitate, however, to issue fraud orders against every individual, bureau, corporation or association engaged in any practice which under the law is fraudulent."

"Instructions have been given to the chief inspector to investigate and make full report to my office with respect to all such frauds."

Farley said the recent rise in the stock market "has resulted in the reappearance of the so-called 'tipster sheet' and the revival of 'market services' designed only to separate people from their money."

He refused to assist District Attorney John T. Delaney.

The top statement of Dan, "We will not co-operate with the authorities," it is believed, will definitely convince the kidnappers the way is open for them to demand a ransom and the exchange of the young national guard officer.

Two West Side warehouses were searched from top to bottom late today by police looking for the kidnaped son of O'Connell.

Receiving an anonymous tip that the 24-year-old youth might be found in a West Fifty-fourth street warehouse, police searched the building thoroughly without finding any trace of young O'Connell or his kidnappers.

Moving downtown, the searchers then turned through a six-story warehouse in West Twenty-seventh, between Tenth and Eleventh avenues, with similar results.

Since the boy was snatched early in the morning of July 7, the O'Connells, able through their political connections to turn loose an army of investigators, have relied on a personal deal with the kidnappers. The first contact with the kidnappers, a telephone call to Ed O'Connell's law office, the family was warned not to authorize the boy's life would pay for their failure to observe this order, the voice said. A ransom of $250,000 was demanded.

Irrked by the slowness of the family negotiations, Delaney yesterday complained because the O'Connell family would not aid him. Until the Delaney outburst virtually all of the officers on the case marked time in deference to the family's wishes.

Delaney has had the support of the O'Connells in his campaigns for the district attorneyship. Ed O'Connell is a prominent democratic chairman and with his brother exercises a virtual control over city and county offices.

HOME OF ORTIZ RUBIO GUARDED AFTER THREATS

SAN DIEGO, Cal., July 16.—(AP) City police joined private guards at the home of Pascual Ortiz Rubio, former president of Mexico, today to protect him against the kidnapping threatened twice in anonymous telephone messages.

The telephone call, speaking in English, demanded $50,000. The first call was made July 7. Ortiz Rubio was instructed to obtain cash and leave it at a designated spot. Confident his personal guard could cope with the situation, he did not comply with instructions nor did he notify police.

Yesterday the second call came, apparently from the same man.

"Do not let your son or the president will be abducted and something worse may happen to him," the former president's secretary said he was told. "This is the last chance."

DIXIE ACCIDENTS CLAIM LIVES OF 15

Drownings Take Toll of Five; Auto Mishaps Ac- count for Four.

By the Associated Press.

Drowning displaced automobile mishaps as the leading cause of accidental deaths this week-end for the first time this year, as the southeast counted 15 persons dead.

Four persons lost their lives in Tennessee, three each in Georgia, Florida and Virginia, and one each in Alabama and Mississippi. Drownings caused five of the deaths, automobile accidents four, and airplane crash three, falls two, and a train one.

Two young persons were drowned on Sunday swimming parties near Knoxville, Tenn. Virginia Horton, 17, stepped into deep water in the Tennessee river and drowned; and a young negro also was drowned in the river. At Hendersonville, D. Adult Camp Opens At Camp Highland Saturday, July 29

The adult camp, opening at Camp Highland July 29, when business girls and their friends have exclusive use of the Y. W. C. A. camp, will be featured by three convenient arrangements: A vacation special whereby business girls may spend their entire holiday at camp for a very reasonable fee; a "commuter's convenience" when transportation will be arranged for those spending the nights only, and varied attractions during the week-end when dances and other amusements will furnish unusual entertainment.

Archery, tennis, hiking, swimming, baseball and horseshoe-pitching will keep each minute filled for the athletically inclined, while tired business women who desire only rest and relaxation will find ample opportunity for reclining under the trees or reading a book in a cozy corner of Anne Borkin lodge. The adult camp is planned to allow individual choice and no set regulations will interfere.

During the week-end of July 29-30, special parties are already arranged by the "Y" Southern Bell Club, Rich's store, Gulf Refining Company, Sears-Roebuck, with other groups to be announced later. Visitors from other stores and offices will be welcomed at this time also. Business Girls' League and other "Y" clubs will fill a number of shacks August 5-6, together with business girls from all over the city. As a special concession to girls registering for both week-ends a bargain price of $3 is made. The price for one week-end is $1.75 and this includes from Saturday afternoon to Monday morning. The entire vacation period of nearly 10 days costs only $8.50. The commuters' rates will be announced at an early date.

Many girls are arranging house party gaieties by inviting congenial groups to share the same shacks. The following reservations for shacks have already been made: Miss Mary Hatcher, Elizabeth Haines, Mary Hall, Reggie Sue Daniel, Peggy Launius, Thelma Cobb.

Miss Florida Hatcher, business girls' secretary of the Y. W. C. A., will be director of the adult camp and will be assisted by Miss Carrie Lou Allgood, industrial secretary. Many business girls will be guests of the Y. W. C. A. this afternoon, when a poetry tea will be held. Poetry used at "Y" conferences, camp songs and anecdotes about summer experiences will fill the afternoon with pleasant entertainment. Members of the six "Y" clubs and their friends are invited.

The "Southern Bell Club" will enjoy a straw hat luncheon Tuesday afternoon at 37 Auburn avenue at 5:30 o'clock, the girls will ride out Roswell road, where a picnic supper will be served. The Clover Club will give a picnic Thursday afternoon, according to an announcement by Miss Bernice Roe, president.

Nakanawa Activities Interest Atlantans

MAYLAND, Tenn., July 16.—With the completion of the first two weeks of the season every day at the Nakanawa camps, Mayland, Tenn., becomes more interesting and Atlanta campers have participated in all activities. Thursday, July 6, the campers gathered in the woods for the first council ring of the season. Colonel Rice, as chief of the tribal assembly, spoke. A moral interlude was presented under the direction of Miss Jennie Mae McQuiddy, of Nashville.

Mary Dinsmore, Jane Kelley, Eleanor Peebles, Mary Cary Maynard and Frances Austin played on the square teams in the first soccer game Thursday. Miss Josephine Walker is director of all field sports.

All Atlanta girls entered in one or more of the contests held Saturday. The water counselor staff is headed by Miss Ruth White Little, of New Orleans, La. She has had charge of Nakanawa lake sports for a number of years and is considered one of the most capable physical education instructors in the south. Her assistants are Red Cross lifesavers who give instruction in diving, swimming, canoeing and rowing according to the latest methods.

The first weekly song fest was held Friday evening. All Atlanta girls took part in the stunt night held Saturday. The prize was presented to the group which gave "Spirits of Nakanawa." Jane Kelley and Mary Dinsmore were cast in a clever modernization of "Cinderella." Mary Cary Maynard and Frances Austin had roles in the "Old Picture Album."

Both of the girls were dressed in costumes of 20 years ago. Junior camp council ring was held Friday. Eloise Dickey enjoyed the Hollywood ball given Saturday. Costumes were worn and used by the girls in representing movie stars were original.

An all-state group consisting of girls from Alabama, Georgia, Oklahoma, Mississippi and Pennsylvania, presented the vesper service Sunday. Jane Kelley spoke on a new phase of the personality of Christ and Mary Dinsmore gave the prayer. Colonel and Mrs. Rice were at home to a number of camps after the vesper hour. A circus was held July 12 and the senior counselors directed the affair. Mary Cary Maynard and Frances Austin were clowns, while Eleanor Peebles was a tumbler.

Jane Kelley played in the first tennis round robin of the season. This tournament is between eight Varsity and eight Amateurs for divisional distinctions. The Nakanawa tennis rankings in senior camp have been posted and include five players on the team and a group of seven specialists who are just below the team members. There is nothing permanent about this rating because any player may challenge the girl above her to a match and in case the challenger wins she takes the position formerly held by the player who was defeated. This form of competition has worked well in past years and gives impetus to many to strive for higher rankings in tennis.

Croquet, an exclusive art club, was organized last year by Miss Edith Mahler, Baton Rouge, La., director of all art projects in senior camp and associate professor in the art department of the University of Oklahoma. This year there are 10 former members enrolled in camp and they have accepted the same number of new ones. Frances Austin and Mary Dinsmore are members of this group. Primarily Croquet is a sketching class but numerous other things are to be attempted this season.

Bryant, of Decatur, to A. T. Thompson, of Fulton, Ky., and Atlanta, which was solemnized Sunday, July 16, at 9:30 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, on West Howard avenue.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE. When Mary Sawyer is 13 she obtains the permission of her father, Dr. Mansfield Sawyer, to leave her Midwestern Va. home to learn dress designing in Hollywood. She meets Freckle Bryan, a movie extra, and goes to live with her. Freckle takes her to a charity fair at the beautiful estate of Curt Little, movie producer, who recognizes Mary as the daughter of the man who stole the love of his wife in Virginia 20 years ago. Instantly he is determined to revenge himself through pretty Mary. He had written to Glorinda, his wife of a year, only once while on his way to Oklahoma, telling her she could have her home and small bank account. After taking the name of Curt Little, everything he touches turns to gold. First all, then the movies. At 20, Curt is a prematurely gray but handsome. The night after the fair, while Mary is at the Cinema Club with him, Tom Smith turns up at Freckle's apartment and announces he is Mary's fiancé. Tom has made the cross-country trip in the old car he assembled from odd parts. When Mary returns at 3 in the morning, she upbraids him for following her. After a scene, he leaves, saying she can reach him at the "E.T." When she goes, Mary breaks down and sobs, not telling Freckle the engagement is only a happy-go-lucky affair, begun in high school. She waits near the telephone the next day but all the calls are for Freckle. She dines with Curt, who says he has a friend in the dress-designing business and will speak to her of Mary's situation. When she returns home, Freckle gives her a letter. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

he perfectly natural with Curt Little from now on—now that she knew he was so much younger than she had thought. Still in his thirties! Why that wasn't old at all. Just an interesting bachelor age.

Her thoughts strayed to Tommy. Would he forgive her for standing him up?

The next morning was cool and it gave Mary a chance to dress in her best business-like, sophisticated outfit.

A black princess dress of lovely georgette with a white silk-lined coat to match. She had made it with an odd, cassock-like white collar that tied in back. With it she wore a small white turban with a long black pin decorating the front.

The hat was so far back on her forehead that you could see her hair was black and straight and parted in the middle. Few girls could have gotten away with it, but Mary looked like an odd little Indian doll, except for her very white skin.

Freckle looked up from repairing the rent in one of her stockings and caught Mary in the act of putting rouge on her cheeks.

"Feeling a little pale over Tommy this morning, aren't you, honey? Don't worry. He'll be back—like a revolving door. Let him sink until he learns how to grow up!"

Freckle was still sure she shouldn't tell Mary that Tommy had sworn he'd never be back. Mary threw the rouge puff down with a weary sigh.

"Oh, I'm really to blame this time. But there's just no use trying to explain to him. He can't understand. Do I look all right?"

"You look perfect." Freckle got up and gave the verdict while Mary turned slowly. "Not a stitch out of place. If Madame Dumas doesn't take you on she doesn't know her stuff. Walk over there the way I showed you last night. And don't forget your hips. Sway them just a little."

Mary walked the slow, measured walk of the professional mannikin, holding her long, white fingers lightly on her small, lithe hips. Freckle applauded.

"O.K.!" You've got it down to a science. Now don't go in there acting like a worried little country kid. Go in with your head up and let 'em know you're from one of the finest families of Virginia. And make 'em like it."

Mary, seldom emotional enough to show her feelings to another girl, threw her arms around Freckle and gave her an affectionate little kiss on the cheek.

"Oh, I'm so excited, honey. It seems like a dream. And I owe it all to you."

Freckle gave her a tight squeeze. "Don't be an egg, you see."

"If it hadn't been for you I'd never have met Curt Little."

"Well, maybe not. But millionaires flock around girls like him around a lily buttercup. If it hadn't been Little it would have been another poor sap."

"I like that!" Mary shrugged serenely. "Poor sap—because he asks me for a date?"

"He could do worse." Freckle grinned. "But any other girl in your place would have made a sap out of him. They'd take him over like Grant took Richmond. Get going. Beautiful. I'm dying to hear what happens."

Mary put her hands on her hips and sauntered out in her newly-acquired mannikin stride, her heart beating a tattoo of joyful excitement. Madame Dumas' establishment was a house on a side street. It had been a private residence. The only sign that told it was different from any other house on the block was a small gold plaque on the door that read:

CISSIE DUMAS
Couturier
Paris New York Hollywood
Mary hesitated a moment at the imposing entrance gathering her nerve. The only bit of display to be seen was a plain, rigidly smart Parisian looking gown of black velvet against a backdrop of red.

It was beautiful—the longer you stood there and looked at it the more you caught the beauty of the idea that Cissie Dumas had been trying to put across when she dressed her window. Color—line—symmetry.

Mary understood, because that same desire was born in her—the desire to make people feel the beauty of clothes and colors. Her hesitation dropped from her suddenly, and eagerly she stepped through the door that was swung to by a tall man in red liver.

"I have an appointment with Madame Dumas," she told the black-gowned blonde who stepped forward instantly with an ingratiating smile. "Your name, please, mademoiselle?"

The girl spoke with a slight foreign accent, which sounded French.

"Miss Sawyer," Mary tried to look very grown up and important.

"Right back here, please, mademoiselle," the girl motioned Mary to follow her through a small draped door at the rear. "Madame is expecting you."

Madame Dumas sat, a small, radiant platinum blonde, surrounded by bolts and boxes of materials of the season's leading colors. She waved a cigarette toward a chair absent when Mary was announced, without looking up.

The girl left and Mary, her knees beginning to shake with uncertainty, had five minutes in which to tremble and look Madame Dumas over before she looked up from the contemplation of the yards of cloth.

Mary saw that she was very small, almost as small as herself. Her bluish white hair was marcelled in deep waves so close to her head that they looked painted on. Not a hair was out of place. Her eyes were half closed—but Mary could see that they were sparkly—typical French eyes—and that she was a woman who might be 30 or 50. Glittering, blase—wordly.

Dumas—she preferred being called just that—glazed at Mary silently a moment before she spoke. There was a trace of French accent in her soft voice.

"You have never had experience as a mannikin?"

"No," Mary smiled tremblingly. "Didn't Mr. Little tell you? I am entirely without experience, but I know if you would give me a chance I could please you. Oh! I'd try so hard."

Dumas smiled humoringly—touched with the childish eagerness and the musical southern voice.

"You are very unique—in looks and manner. I shouldn't be a bit surprised but what you would be a worth-while addition to my staff of models. Walk for me, please. Over there."

Mary got up obediently and walked as Freckle had taught her. Dumas nodded her head approvingly.

"You are graceful and you wear your arms around Freckle, don't you? You didn't do that ensemble, of course."

"I did," Mary flushed with pleasure—"every bit of it without anyone helping me."

Madame Dumas looked genuinely surprised.

"So! That is remarkable for one so young. Where did you copy it?"

"Right out of my own head," Mary opened the cassock collar and took off the coat. "I made the dress, too. Did you really think it's well made?"

"It is almost unbelievable," the famous couturier smiled in a friendly manner and got up. "I'm going to give you a chance, Miss Sawyer. Come in at 9:30 tomorrow morning."

Retired Fire Captain Stresses Value of Savings for Home Building

G. H. DYER POINTS TO FIRST MUTUAL AS GUIDING LIGHT

Veteran "Smoke-Eater" Has Built Own Residence as Result of Systematic Saving.

He who doubts or goes blindly through life unmindful of the advantage of savings for a home should find ample conviction and conversion in a few minutes' talk with Captain G. H. Dyer, retired officer of the Atlanta fire department and for the last nine years a shareholder in the First Mutual Building and Loan Association, 23 Auburn avenue, N. E.

The importance of thrift at an early age cannot be stressed too greatly, declares Captain Dyer, who served as a "smoke eater" in the city department for 35 years, the last 14 as a captain of Engine Company No. 2. Captain Dyer was retired last year and now lives amid the comfort of a home built through systematic savings through the last years of his active service.

"Like a lot of youngsters of today," the captain remarks, "I made a lot and lost a lot of money in my younger years. In fact, I had to lose a lot before I learned to save."

Of the First Mutual Building and Loan Association, of which he became a member almost at its inception in 1924, Captain Dyer has the following to say:

"For the past nine years I have been investing money with this association. As an investment, I think it is the best buy in Atlanta today."

As to home owners, if offers the best plan that I know of. It gives people an opportunity to turn their money over at home in place of turning it over to the big cities in the north and east. It keeps our money at home and that is what I like about it."

"The First Mutual is managed by high-class businessmen of Atlanta. That, I think, makes it safe, sound and conservative. I have found the officers and executives at all times ready to give advice and to help the shareholders in any way they can." The concrete evidence of Captain Dyer's faith in First Mutual is the beautiful home he has built with the thousands of dollars he saved there. Situated at 2000 McJannet avenue, on a lot 50 by 200 feet, is a fine six-room English brick bungalow—Captain Dyer's home. Surrounding it are his hobbies—his rock gardens, his flowers and his fish pond—things of beauty which give him unending hours of pleasure and rest and comfort in his years of retirement.

Captain Dyer's home was built at a cost of approximately $7,000—the result of years of patient and systematic saving in the First Mutual Building and Loan Association.

Nor is Captain Dyer content with merely having built his own home. So confirmed is he in his belief in the value of such savings that he is proving an inspiration among his comrades of the fire department and his other friends, and many have followed his example.

The First Mutual, he points out, is a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank system and of the United States Building and Loan League—affiliations which insure for its shareholders a service of the highest quality.

Shares in First Mutual, he further points out, pay 6 per cent annual interest, compounded semi-annually.

Two classes of people, he adds, take membership in the association, those who put money in and those who borrow it.

"Be a lender," he advises. In other words, be one of the thousands who save, and who profit by the annual dividends.

The money loaned by the association, under the laws of Georgia—and First Mutual, by the way, operates under the direction of the Georgia state securities commission as well as the Federal Home Loan Bank system—must be secured by first mortgages on developed real estate located within Fulton county. Thus, the association is in the strictest sense of the word a "home" institution.

If you want to be a home-owner, see Captain Dyer, or call on George W. West, president, of any other officer or director of First Mutual. A few moments' discussion of your dream soon will convince you of the advantages First Mutual offers, and with your systematic co-operation your dream will become a reality.

COTTON ADVANCES BEYOND 12 CENTS IN EXCITING WEEK

Trading Closes, However, With Gain of Little Over $6.50 a Bale on Profit-Taking.

NEW ORLEANS, July 16.—(AP)—Cotton experienced the most active and exciting week in years and prices reached and passed the 12-cent line for all months back of October and almost reached the 12 cents point on that month as well. At the highest prices of the week October and December, the two most active months, showed gains over the closing of a week ago of 154 points, October advancing to 11.86 and December to 12.03. These were the highest prices experienced since March, 1931.

While this big advance naturally brought in a heavy wave of profit-taking near the end of the week buying continued in heavy volume and the week closed with a net advance of more than 130 points, or a little over $6.50 a bale.

The main stimulating factor during the week was the practical certainty that the Wallace plan for abandonment of acreage would be a complete success and the announcement made late Friday from Washington showed that this belief has been realized.

Another stimulating influence was the sharp upturn in the price of sterling which advanced almost to the old-time gold parity.

Another helpful influence was the unfavorable character of the weather and crop news from the interior. Temperatures have been high and there has been a lack of rain in many sections, indicating that the drought has become serious. Still another help to the market was the sharp advance in the price of wheat which at the close of the week had touched 1.14.

Despite the rapid advance in prices there has been a good spot demand and the census bureau on Thursday reported the consumption by domestic mills to have reached during June the record total for all time of 696,472 bales. Exports for the season have now passed the eight-million-bale mark.

High, low and closing sales in the futures market during the last week compared with a year ago follow:

	High	Low	Close	Last
July	11.51	10.08	11.24	5.76
Oct.	11.86	10.30	11.54	5.84
Dec.	12.03	10.45	11.73	5.98
Jan.	12.05	10.53	11.81	6.06
Mar.	12.21	10.69	11.93	6.20

General Motors Corporation reports export shipments of trucks and cars from its plants in Canada and United States in June were 127 per cent above the same month last year.

G. M. A. Provides Training For West Point, Annapolis

"Honor School" Rating Is Assurance of Excellence of Scholastic and Military Preparation.

Listed by the United States war department for the last eight consecutive years as an "honor school," the Georgia Military Academy stands among the foremost military institutions of its kind in the country.

For years, G. M. A. has maintained a high standard of military training, and the direction of active army officers, assigned for service by the war department.

In addition, the institution is a charter member of the Association of Military Colleges and Schools of the United States—a distinction merited only by military and scholastic training of the highest type.

G. M. A. also is a fully-accredited member of the Southern Association of Colleges and High Schools, thus insuring to its graduates the privilege of entrance to the military and naval academies, as far as allowed by law.

These distinctions give assurance that G. M. A. cadets not only receive a well-grounded preparation for university matriculation, but for entrance to the military and naval academies, as far as allowed by law.

Each honor graduate of G. M. A., according to Major Robert S. Rosser, trustee, secretary-treasurer and head of the language department, is entitled to potential appointment to the military academy at West Point.

The same privilege, he points out, does not apply to entrance at Annapolis, though a number of G. M. A. graduates in the past have gained appointment and entrance to that institution.

G. M. A., headed since its inception 33 years ago by Colonel J. C. Woodward, takes special pride in the superior number of its graduates who later have graduated from Annapolis and West Point, or who are now enrolled in those institutions.

Of the latter, William Starke, son of Judge W. W. Starke, of Commerce, will be a senior at Annapolis next year.

Ralph Haas, of Gadsden, Ala., also is now enrolled at Annapolis.

William Proctor, of Hillsboro, N. H., won an appointment to West Point and will be a junior during the 1933-34 term. During his scholastic years at G. M. A. he had an outstanding athletic record in track events, particularly the 100-yard dash.

John William Bowen, son of Major Bowen, of Fort Benning, another appointee, will be a senior next year at West Point. A member of the G. M. A. football team, he since has "made" the Army varsity squad.

Glenn Garrison, son of Judge A. S. Garrison, of Waucho, Fla., a congressional district appointee to West Point, will be a senior there next term.

Richard Hill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Hill, of Atlanta, has entered the West Point plebe camp in preparation for entrance to the military academy in the fall.

William Louis Fey, son of Mrs. W. L. Fey, of Petersburg, Va., will enter the naval academy at Annapolis in the fall.

Both Hill and Fey, alternate congressional appointees, won entrance to the respective academies through superior scholarship—honors which forcefully illustrate the effective military and scholastic training gained while they were students at G. M. A.

The Georgia Military Academy is a highly standardized select college-preparatory home school, limited to about 275 boarding cadets, that number being sufficiently small to give every pupil close personal attention not possible in larger schools, where the individual attention is lost in the mass.

Briefs From the Business World

Dividend meetings are scheduled for this week by these companies, among others: National Biscuit, Louisville Gas & Electric, National Power & Light, United Biscuit, Cargill and Chicago Yellow Cab.

The Berghoff Brewing Company at Fort Wayne, Ind., has operated at capacity since legalization of beer, and President H. J. Bowerford announces that increasing orders necessitate a $225,000 plant expansion which will double production capacity. The building will be ready in five months.

Consumption of rubber by American buyers reached 67 per cent long tons in June, the largest on record, and a gain of 23.8 per cent over last year and 15.1 per cent over May.

The Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company will advance wages of 4,500 workers today from 17-1/2 to 25 per cent. Coal and ore miners are not affected, since they will be governed by a code under the industrial recovery act.

F. W. Dodge Corporation estimates that construction of all kinds awarded in the 37 states east of the Rocky mountains during June totaled $103,255,400, an increase of about 34 per cent over the previous month.

The International Harvester Company states pay rolls have been reduced by 10 per cent since October 1, wiping out pay reductions ranging from 5 to 10 per cent.

Bridgeport (Conn.) Brass Company has announced a 10 per cent increase will be given 1,800 employees in hour and piece rates, effective today.

The "works council" of the General Electric Company has notified more than 10,000 employees that their contributions to the unemployment pension fund would be reduced this month from 2 to 1 per cent of their earnings, because of improved conditions.

Standard Statistics Company reports the first 12 important chain store and mail order systems to report June sales had an aggregate gain of nearly 7 per cent over dollar volume in June, 1932.

Factory employment in Pennsylvania showed a gain of 67 per cent from May to June and pay rolls increased 14.9 during the same period. Delaware factories reported increases of 8 per cent in employment, 11 per cent in pay rolls and 10 per cent in working time for the same period.

Fifteen hundred men have been put back to work in the Enclay (Ala.) works of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company. Resumption of operations in other plants have brought the number of men employed in steel and iron production to 20,000 in recent weeks, about 60 per cent of normal.

The building will be ready in five months.

EAST POINT FIRM REFLECTS UPTURN IN JUNE BUSINESS

Chevrolet Sales Volume, Together With That of Used Cars, Best of Any Month Since 1931.

The acceleration of business is clearly reflected in reports of June sales and other activities by C. T. McGuire, vice president of the East Point Chevrolet Company.

A substantial increase over past months was recorded both in new and used car sales during June, Mr. McGuire states, the company's books showing the greatest sales volume since 1931.

In the mechanical department, he reports, business was by far the best of any month since 1920.

In addition, Mr. McGuire states, collections during the last few months have shown a steady upward trend and today are in better condition than at any time during the years of depression.

In keeping with this steady upward movement in all lines of activity, the company has found it necessary to increase its mechanical and sales forces to take care of the increased business and despite this the repair shop has found it necessary to work overtime frequently to take care of the work.

The East Point Chevrolet Company is equipped in every way to render a thorough service to the Chevrolet owner. The volume of its sales place it among the leaders in the southeast, both in the new and used car fields.

Used cars sold by the East Point concern are reconditioned and brought up to date in every respect, both as to repainting and thorough mechanical conditioning. Each used car sold carries a liberal guarantee.

"This car is sold positively as is," the company's guarantee reads, "but the East Point Chevrolet Company agrees to allow 50 per cent on any mechanical labor on this automobile should it show defects within 90 days of purchase. It is expressly agreed that all work be performed in our used car reconditioning department only at standard flat-rate prices and on regular cash terms. Twenty-five per cent on genuine Chevrolet parts will be allowed—15 per cent on parts other than Chevrolets."

The company carries a well-balanced stock of approximately 100 used cars at all times, including all makes and models during a year's time.

In addition to these services, the company operates a type of instant road service for Fulton and DeKalb counties which is a distinct innovation in that branch of automotive work. Its "dispatch-tow car"—a skilled, factory-trained mechanic, is ready at an instant's notice to lend aid to stalled automobiles out on the road or at any place within the Greater Atlanta area.

Petroleum showed occasional rallying tendencies, especially after the presidential order against "bootleg" crude.

Big Addition Planned By Tubize-Chatillon

ROME, Ga., July 16.—(AP)—Advices reaching here from the New York offices of the Tubize-Chatillon Corporation say contract has been let for construction of a $500,000 addition to the company's rayon plant in Rome.

Fiske & Carter, contractors of Greenville, S. C., were announced as the successful bidders for the job. That firm built the present plant, which was valued at $4,000,000.

Sterline & Company, of Greenville, was announced as the engineer on the addition project. Vice President F. L. Neidhouser said increasing business made the expansion necessary.

WET SHARES LEAD IN CURB BUOYANCY

Numerous Other Specialties Feature Week's Heavy Trading.

By JOHN L. COOLEY.

NEW YORK, July 16.—(AP)—Large-scale speculative interest in "wet" stocks and a well-sustained demand for numerous specialties has featured recent trading on the New York Curb Exchange.

The "wet" shares last week rallied buoyantly. Hiram Walker, Canadian Industrial Alcohol and Distillers Corporation-Sengram scored big gains in substantial turnovers. Chemical issues generally pointed higher, while textiles and foods firmed.

Utilities were comparatively narrow, although they had a few upward turns. Activity reached something of a climax on Thursday when the curb, in common with the big board, witnessed a surge of trading that piled up the largest turnover since June 12, 1930. All groups were taken in hand during that session, which was succeeded by considerable profit-taking.

Petroleum showed occasional rallying tendencies, especially after the presidential order against "bootleg" crude.

During June cotton mill operations were 125 per cent of the average rate from 1922 to 1927. This compares with 88 per cent in June, 1932. Since March of this year, cotton mills have increased operations by 45 per cent, whereas normally schedules are curtailed approximately 10 per cent during this period.

Retail sales are still gaining, and in some points they are beginning to surpass even the good totals of June. Wholesale buying shows no seasonal lull as buyers are placing orders now for fall requirements in order to take full advantage of current quotations.

NANCY PAGE

Nancy's Blueberry Pie Is Delicious
BY FLORENCE LA GANKE.

"Blueberry pie tastes just as good if you call it huckleberry pie. What's in a name anyway, Nancy, when you bake the pies?"

Nancy never failed to be pleased with her husband's appreciation.

He was not hesitant about complimenting her on anything he liked. From conversation with other women Nancy realized that few men were as thoughtful as Peter in this respect. She forgave him other shortcomings because he was so nice in giving praise.

She knew the praise of the blueberry pie was justified for it was good to look at and even better to eat.

There was the brown top crust with traces of the rich purple juice showing here and there. The filling was just sweet and tart enough. The berries and juice were thick enough so that juice did not run like a spring freshet. And the bottom crust was tender but not juice-soaked.

Nancy had used the hot water pie crust recipe for the pastry. She had lined the pie plate with crust. Then she put in one-half of a cup of sugar mixed with two tablespoons of flour. The washed and picked over berries went in next. Then came the remainder of the cup of sugar.

The top crust with its ornamental floral spray cut in the top was laid on and fastened firmly to the lower crust.

A strip of pastry was laid on and pinched into a fluted edge.

The pie went into a hot oven, 450 degrees. At the end of ten minutes the heat was reduced to 400 degrees. The pie baked for about 40 minutes. It was served while still warm, but not hot.

Nancy has a leaflet on "Pastry." Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Post Trusts Lead Ball

String To Cheat Sleep

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 16.—(AP)—A device made of a ball of lead and a string is Wiley Post's "alarm clock" on his attempted solo flight around the world.

In one hand he holds the ball, which is about the size of a marble. It is fastened to a string, the other end of which is tied to a ring on a finger.

If he dozes from fatigue his muscles will relax and the ball, falling, will yank his finger and awaken him.

Filipino Stage Show Urging Independence

MANILA, P. I., July 16.—(AP)—On the eve of the opening tomorrow of the annual 100-day season of the insular legislature, advocates of Philippine independence paraded tonight and then rallied at an open-air meeting.

The demonstrators adopted a memorial urging that a plebiscite be held on the question of adoption or rejection of the Hawes-Cutler independence act, passed by the United States congress over the veto of former President Hoover.

Police estimated the crowd at about 60,000.

Opponents of the independence act plan a demonstration after the preliminary session opens at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Heavy Truck Runs Wild, Killing 1, Injuring 3

NASSAU, N. Y., July 16.—(AP)—A heavy motor truck loaded with brass pipe burned out its brakes on a Berkshire mountain highway today, rolled down a steep hillside and smashed where religious services were breaking up and killed a father who was driving his family home from church. Four members of the family were injured.

Frightened worshippers leaving St. Mary's church heard the truck round a sharp curve at the foot of the mountain, its horn screaming a warning. Startled automobile drivers steered hurriedly to the curb.

Directly ahead in the narrow main street Emil Boerwyck, 55, was standing homeward with his wife and three children. Before he could steer aside, the truck rammed into the rear of his car, smashing it.

Boerwyck was killed. His wife was found to have fractured ribs; his daughter, Freida, 28, a fractured leg, and 12-year-old son, Arnold, was bruised. Olga, 22, was suffering from such shock that physicians could not tell the nature of her injuries.

Walter C. Griffin, of Geneva, driver of the truck, was arrested on a charge of reckless driving.

Friendly Counsel

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your comments on this column will be published, care The Atlanta Constitution.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

I have never seen a problem like mine discussed in a problem column, though I have often looked for it. I am married, have two children, and my husband and me get along well together. Our home is a harmonious one as any I know. However, we don't love each other and never have. You wonder why we got married? We just didn't realize that the interest and affection we felt for each other was not the soul-stirring passion that everybody longs for. When I was 16 years old the man that I now know was the only man for me, proposed to me. I thought I was too young to be married and told him so. Finally he quit coming to see me and soon I heard he was married to another girl. It was a sad blow to me. My husband was in love with another girl when he met me and I will always believe that he married me for my money. The other girl was poor as a church mouse. She had never married and her shadow came between us yet. I believe my husband feels about her much as I feel about my old beau. So my thoughts turn to the time when my children shall be grown and I shall be free to make a decision about divorcing my husband, while there is yet time for us to try for the sort of love that each of us wants. Can you discuss this?

FRUSTRATED.

ANSWER:

With all its intimation of romance, this is as cold-blooded a proposition as one could imagine. It is not unusual for a girl in her teens to imagine that she can walk through life picking flowers, discarding those that are not to her liking and pursuing her way jauntily until she finds exactly what she likes. But a married woman, the mother of two children, to imagine that she can throw off her marriage bonds at will and look around for another husband that might suit her better is the height of folly and a fine illustration of adult infantilism.

My dear woman, nobody ever found happiness by disregarding duty, by flinging responsibility to the four winds and striking out on a love lark. Marriage and parenthood should bind a woman down to the realities of life and put far from her any chimerical dreams about recapturing the ecstasies of youthful love affairs. There is a time for everything in life and the manner in which we use the opportunities that come to hand determines our ability to enjoy the next in order. How can you be a good mother to one's children or a good wife to one's husband when you are indulging in day dreams about divorce and remarriage? How can you expect your little ones to have any moral integrity when you are bidding your time to cut and run, deserting your husband and breaking up your home? By precept and example these little ones must be taught the lessons of love and duty. Your future happiness depends upon how well you do this task.

Life gets us all down out of the high heaven of youth. No matter what man you have married you would have found maturity eventually different from youth. Life is different from the ecstatic experience of first love in early youth. For any woman to be anxious to husband a boy and have two children living with her in a harmonious home is joy and happiness enough, without her reaching out for illicit pleasures that might lead to an unknown future.

LUTHERAN SECRETARY URGES MORE FAITH

CHICAGO, July 16.—(AP)—Man's panacea for the present world chaos are woefully lacking in the prime element of appeal to and faith in the Deity, Dr. Erwin Umbach, executive secretary of the Lutheran Waltham League, told the Luther Day assembly at the World's Fair today.

"Ours is no vain rejoicing," he said. "We build not upon the fume of the pleasures of men. Man has all sorts of plans and remedies to suggest for the unparalleled situation in which the world finds itself today. The trouble with these plans is the small difficulty that beset Elijah when he would see God—the wind, the earthquake, and the fire elements are too evident."

Culbertson on Contract

Don't Shout.

BY ELY CULBERTSON.

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

Mr. Daniel Steinberg, of Brooklyn, N. Y., recently submitted to me a hand which occurred at one of the weekly sessions of his bridge club, and asked me to comment on the bidding and play. The hand in question is an excellent example of the advantages of proceeding slowly and cautiously, rather than rushing into what may be an unmakeable contract because one partner fears that the other will not be able to hear him if he speaks in a low tone rather than shouting at the top of his voice. In bridge most correct contracts are reached by the exact exchange of inferences between the partners, with neither overbidding nor underbidding interfering with the accurate drawing of inferences. Mr. Steinberg's hand, which brought about the defeat of the partnership by 1 trick, was the following:

East and West vulnerable.

♠ J 10 8 6 4 2
♦ A 6 4 2

1—A sound Opening bid.

2—The Overall is justified not only by the possession of 2-1-2 honors, but by the strong distributional values of the hand.

3—North should not jump to game. Three spades is a sufficient indication of the strong support for partner's bid suit, and certainly assures that South will bid again if game is possible, as indeed it must be if South's Opening bid is sound.

4—A daring bid, but actually, as the cards lie, a very light sacrifice to prevent non-vulnerable opponents from making a game.

5—South has no other course. His hand suggests that five spades cannot be made.

6—North rightly bids five spades. However, it is impossible for him to obliterate the mistaken impression he has created in South's mind by the triple Raise of the Opening spade bid.

7—South should not bid six spades. His own hand contains only one Ace. It is too much to expect that his partner will insure the solidity of the trump suit and present him with two Aces in side suits, necessary for the making of the Small Slam contract.

8—An unsound Double, as the most that West can hope for is the defeat of the contract by 1 trick. It is, of course, obvious that in the play South has lost one club and one heart trick. As a matter of fact, East and West, by careful play, could have defeated the contract 2 tricks, but West, against the Slam, elected to open the Ace of hearts and followed with the King of clubs, and thus South did not lose a diamond trick.

To answer Mr. Steinberg's question as to the correct bidding, in my judgment the final contract should have been five spades, and the bidding should have been as follows:

South West North East

1♠ 2♣ 4♠ 3♠

Whether or not West should bid five clubs at this point is questionable, but if he does so, then North should double or bid five spades, but if South doubles five clubs, North, by his unbalanced hand, indicates that there may not be a possibility of even a single trick in spades against the club contract, should bid five spades. North's bid of five spades, if it occurred in the actual bidding, however, should not have been construed by South as a Slam try, however mild, as if North were interested in a Slam, he would have available, during the course of the bidding, other and better bids to show the possession of the stuff that Slams are made of—namely, favorable distribution and control of the first round of at least three suits.

To sum up, then, North erred in his first bid of four spades; South erred in bidding five spades. Inasmuch as the bidding by West is not in question, there is no point in passing upon it. Certainly his bid of five clubs, vulnerable, while it had a happy result, was dangerous in the extreme.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

If North and South have reached a contract of six spades, what should you, holding the East hand here, do, and what is West's correct Opening lead if East has overcalled two clubs with two trump? North, Dealer.
